Mississippi flood insurance study begins next week

By WAYNE DUCOMB JR. A $1 million federally-funded Mississippi Gulf Coast flood insurance study will begin in Hancock County next week.

Gee and Jenson Engineers-Architects-Planners of West Palm Beach, Fla. was recently contracted by the Federal Emergency Management Agency in Washington D.C. to prepare flood insurance studies for 12 Mississippi communities.

Maynard Long, FEMA hydraulic engineer, said in Washington D.C. Wednesday afternoon, an 18-month Mississippi contract with Gee and Jenson totals $996,433.

The studies were authorized by the federal agency under the Flood Disaster Protection Act Amendments of 1973 to the National Flood Insurance

Gee and Jenson's study will help provide government-subsidized insurance for property owners in flood Project administrator and manager Carl Thomsen of Gee and Jenson said in West Palm Beach Wednesday, "We will be visiting all areas of the county next week to talk with local communityofficials and city and county

Two Diamondhead youths admit Halloween pranks

By ELLIS CUEVAS Two juvenile residents of Diamondhead have been apprehended after admitting involvement in ten Halloween pranks, according to Earl (Buck) Ladner, director of Diamondhead Security.

"The two have admitted to ten of the branks and we are still checking the other four incidents," Ladner said. The Halloween mischief included destruction of mail boxes, damage to two wooden walkway bridges and slashing of automobile tires, according Ladner added, "Hancock Sheriff Ronald (Ronnie) Peterson and Diamondhead Security have been investigating the Halloween damages and the apprehension was made last

The two have not been turned over to iuvenile authorities pending further investigation, according to Ladner. Peterson said he and Investigator Delbert Seay have been assisting Diamondhead's Security in the matter. Peterson commented, "We think more persons were involved and we will continue the investigation."

"Tentatively, we will be starting our stady in Hancock County to conduct a field reconnaisance of the Pearl River area." Thomsen reported.

"Our study concerns coastal storm: surges," he added.

Bill Massey, FEMA emergency management specialist for Mississippi and Georgia, said in Atlanta Wednesday afternoon, "Problems with" flood elevations in Pearlington will be resolved with this study."

Current Mississippi flood plain regulations include all land at or below 13.1 feet above sea level, whereas Louisiana flood plain laws include all property at or below 11 feet.

Thomsen noted, "Basically, this study will update existing flood zone information, but we will coordinate our study with all previous studies." However, FEMA officials said a comprehensive flood study in Mississippi has not been undertaken. Massey said, "There really hasn't been a previous study."

"We have a flood study in Mississippi based on previously gathered information, but we've never had a technically detailed study of flood elevations along the Gulf Coast," Massey explained.

Long explained FEMA is conducting detailed studies of flood prone areas all over the U.S.

"Mississippi is a re-study. The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers made a flood plain man after Hurricane Camille in 1969, but their information was based on effects of that hurricane," the hydraulic engineer noted Massey reported, "We will make Mississippi's flood plain maps more accurate. Presently, local county and city plain ordinances which include building permits and construction regulations. However, Massey noted the Corps maps do not accurately show land contours and some flood plains may ning commissions enforce flood contain property not prone to flooding. He also explains that flood zone elevations may vary in various locations as a result of Gee and Jenson's study.

"We will also establish a 'velocity zone.' This is an area which is subject to hurricane wave action," Massey said.

"Everybody on the Coast includes ordinances for these velocity areas, but those areas have not yet been designated," Massey explained.

John Scafide, Hancock County Planning Commission attorney, said Wednesday, "We met with FEMA officials at the Courthouse about a year and a half ago to discuss a reevaluation of the flood zones along the Gulf Coast."

"Gee and Jenson will feed information into computers which will simulate the effects of about 100 past hurricanes to see what effects they will have on our area," Scafide explained. The planning commission attorney also noted the study would designate

School opening date opposed by teachers

BY BRENT MACEY Bay St. Louis Municipal School District teachers Monday protested an earlier school board decision to begin the 1981-1982 school year Sept. 8 rather than in late August.

Teachers had complained after the board's October meeting that the date change matter had not been included on an advanced agenda, leaving them without an opportunity to object to the move at that time.

At the board's meeting Monday, teacher spokesmen urged the next school year start in August, as it has for the last ten years.

he school board moved to take the teachers proposal under advisement and give a definite answer at the next board meeting.

Mrs. Pamela Griffon, president of the Bay St. Louis Federation of Teachers. said a survey has shown 80 percent of the teachers in favor of the earlierstarting date.

Their reasons, according to Griffon.

Bay asks $1.6 million in Small Cities grants

By ELLIS CUEVAS

The City of Bay St. Louis will seek grants totalling $1.6 million for the 1981 Small Cities project through preapplication plans approved Tuesday.

Ronnie Murray, Small Cities administrator, was authorized to file the preapplication with Mayor Larry Bennett's signature at a recess meeting of the City Council.

Murray, Gulf Regional Planning Commission employee, handled the 1978 and 1979 Small Cities grants as administrator.

The 1978 grant was used for upgrading of water and sewerage in the 500 block of Washington, Kellar and Sycamore Streets.

The 1979 grant is nearing completion and involves the 500 blocks of deMontluzin, State, Main and St. John Streets. The water and sewerage parts of the project are just about completed and the patching of the streets is now underway.

In 1980 Bay St. Louis was turned down on the Small Cities requests which included gas line renovations. In 1981 requests include gas line renovations estimated at $433,000 for construction, engineering, and administration.

Housing rehabilitation is estimated at $1,055,000 with another $83,000 for demolition and acquisition.

A request for $29,000 for recreation is included in this year's application. To reach a $1,666,000 total, general administrative costs contingencies, and engineer fees are to be added. Murray reported to the Council,

"That public hearings were held for citizen input before the projects were recommended for approval by the It will be January before the Bay will know if the projects will be approved, according to the administrator. In other business, the Council accepted a letter from Omer J. DeBever, consulting engineer for the Windmill DeBever's report stated that the windmill project is about 75 percent complete.

It also mentioned that one of the towers at Bay Senior High had jackknifed at the mid-section during construction and the propeller of one unit was damaged.

The report went on to say that Mississippi Power Company and Coast Electric Power have installed meter bases...

Steve Wages, representative of Moore and Powell, certified public accountants, appeared before the council to report on an annual audit being performed by the firm.

A statement in the amount of $4,163 was authorized as partial payment for the annual audit was authorized by the Council.

When questioned if the firm would have the report on time, Wages reported that it should be ready as outline in the agreement.

Council member Fred Wagner noted, "The first couple years of our term, Moore and Powell was very prompt and the last year or so they have kinda dragged their feet."

Wages said, "We have quality control in our company and try to complete audits in 90 days. but feel we can work within the" 75 days on our agreement. We have had some personnel problems our office, of course that is our problem."

SAFETY CORNER

Modern farm tractors are safer and more comfortable than ever to operate. But, they don't think for themselves. Operate and maintain your tractor according to the instruction manual. Allow only trained, competent people to run your tractor. Avoid tractor trippers like ditches, steep slopes, holes, and other obstacles. Keep children away from tractors and other equipment. Keep the PTO shields in place and shut off power before dismounting. Adjust your travel speed to conditions—slow down on rough, muddy, or slippery ground.

Scafidi said.

If the school semester begins in August then 'teachers will not miss a pay day.'

According to board member James Ginn, the board had changed the date because of the 'heat' and a problem with students transfering from other parts of the county and country.

Superintendent J. D. McCullouch agreed with Ginn and added the county was changing the school beginning date to September 'so we agreed to go along with the county.

Griffon said the availability of air conditioning would offset the heat. She said, "The heat wave of this year was an oddity which has as much chance of repeating itself as a storm like Camille has of hitting us two years in a row."

Griffon mentioned competition for summer jobs by faculty and students as another reason for the August starting: date and an earlier Spring release date.

Mrs. Mary K. Dean, president of the Bay St. Louis Association of Education, said students are hard to manage in the spring because they are anxious for summer. "It is easier to motivate children in the fall." Dean said.

Nell Woodal, a teacher at North Bay Elementary, said teachers are being 'loaded down' with additional work like the Title One remedial work, Project CAP and the AIM Project.

"We really do need the semester to end before the Christmas holidays," Woodall said. "We need time to regroup before the rest of the year.

In another matter, Dean expressed appreciation to the board for its transfer of third grade classes from delapidated trailers at North Bay to rooms at Bay High School.

"Mrs. James, Mrs. Pierce and I have a good feeling about being in a good environment in a clean class room;" Dean said.

She said the closed building 'makes a tremendous difference in the children.' She feels it has 'calmed them' and made the atmosphere more conducive tó learning.

Dean said the high school students are 'gracious to and are almost protective of the young third graders.' In other business, Mrs. Brenda Scafidi, special education supervisor, reported on Mississippi's standing among national programs for the learning disabled.

According to Scafidi, Hancock County has been keeping up and is about equal to national percentages at

Safety Tips For Taking Medicine

There is a right way and a wrong way to do most things, including taking medicine.

When medicine is taken correctly, the exact dose is taken at the proper time, under conditions that insure against error.

The Bottom Line

About Advertising and Business Topics.

Ellis Cuevas, Publisher

I'm setting up an advertising budget for my store, based on a percentage of sales. Where Do I Go From Here? Dear WDIGFH: You've made a good start, as long as you restrict advertising to legitimate promotion. Donations and other charity gifts; even if called advertising, should be budgeted separately.

The next step is to determine the sales pattern of types of goods and specific items.

Then each weekly or monthly advertising plan can be failured according to specific items and anticipated income.

The whole theory here is to promote when there is already a demand. Advertising will help you do more of what you have already been doing. Off season demand can be created, but the expense of doing so is many times not justified by the results. So generally what you do is budget a percentage of advertising each month, based on the percentage of sales that was made that same month last year. Items to be promoted are determined the same way.

All the information to do this is in your company records. There may be periods when all logic tells you are stem should have sold, but didn't. Promote it, but note your results. Buying patterns may simply be different in your

Also consider sales produced by season end clearances—most of these goods should have been promoted earlier when profit margins would have been much higher.

Some marketing experts recommend a percentage increase of promotion during periods of slow sales and a let-up during

Sales made in slow times are already expensive enough without extra promotion. In peak periods of sales the same promotion can accelerate sales far beyond any increases that might be gained in slow times.

Somewhere in between these two extremes they are the same promotion. tremes, however, are those retailers-grocers for instance—who use almost the same space every week. An ad at the wrong time; early or late, is much less effective than one run when the most prospects are about to make a decision to buy.

So make out a detailed calendar with amounts to spend and major items to promote every week or month. Allow some flexibility for new kinds of business, but a budget without detail is of little real value.

"Pearlington residents claim the minimum flood plain elevation is too high," he cited.

Thomsen said, "The object of NFIP is to reduce the amount of government relief to individuals by requiring communities to set up rules, regulations and zoning restrictions which will reduce future flood areas."

"The program enables property owners to buy flood insurance at a reasonable rate. In return, communities will carry out local flood plain management measures to protect lives and new construction from future flooding," he explained.

"In the Mississippi studies, detailed coastal storm surge analysis will be performed for approximately 200 miles of coastline and barrier islands. Also, roughly 150 miles of rivers will be studied," Thomsen noted.

"In all, 16 rivers and streams will be included in the analysis, among them the Pearl and Jordan rivers in Hancock County; the Wolf, Biloxi and Tchoutacabouffa rivers in Harrison County; and Pascagoula and Escatapa rivers in Jackson County," he reported.

"The work will require new surveys to provide up-to-date topographic mapping of about 100 square miles of riverine and coastal areas in Jackson County," Thomsen said.

The administrator said between eight and 10 men will work on the project over the 18-month period. "A great deal of research is involved in the preliminary stages of the study. A detailed history of previous flooding is prepared for each community or area being studied. Information is gathered from news articles, high water mark records; contours and elevations of the land are analyzed. Some physical information is found on existing maps. Other cases call for new surveys, both aerial and ground, to obtain the most current data available," Thomsen ex-

"Hydrology is used to measure flow -of water in rivers, and hydraulics to

"It involves collection of widespread data to come up with a final product. This aspect is very interesting and we use a computer to analyze all the information and come up with the answers," the ad-

"Once preliminary studies and flood mapping are complete, Gee & Jenson will meet with the various communities involved and explain the results of the studies," Thomsen stated.

Menhaden long has been prized as a source of fish oil? used in the cosmetic industry. More recently the fish meal left behind as a by-productonce the oil is removed has become the pride and prize of at least five Gulf Coast animal feed processing plants. The meal goes primarily into chicken rations.

Zach Lea, a fisheries specialist with the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service Sea Grant Advisory ·Program at Biloxi, said menhaden is used for chicken feed for a number of reasons. "It is high in protein, and it Livestock were in fair con- is the protein additive that is used in the chicken rations," Lea said. "It also is fairly inexpensive so poultry producers can keep their feed prices down."

But, what poultrymen prize

most about the menhaden meal is its unidentified growth factor. No one claims to know what it is, but Lea said it seems to make the chickens grow faster than they normally would on more typical soybean or bone meal rations. Lea said three feed held alongside the boats.

manufacturing firms in After the net is drawn for Mississippi process menhaden meal, and two other firms alongside. Using a fish pump, operate in other southern states.

'It is a highly concentrated industry," he said. "It takes a great deal of equipment and heavy plant investment."

The search for menhaden adds to the complexity of and shipped to markets for use investment. It involves both air and sea searches to find the fish. Airplanes overhead spot schools of the menhaden and radio locations to waiting net boats.

Net boats approach the schools of fish from one side, then separate slowly, letting out nets to encircle the fish. The airplane continues to guide the net boats allowing them to get all the fish.

surrounded, fishermen slowly begin drawing in the "purse seine" that closes at the shipped to feed manufacturers bottom, trapping the fish. Once the "purse" is shut, the top cork line is drawn into the boats. The menhaden are one of the places it is shipped concentrated into a "bag" and a carrier vessel is called the storage vessel crew draws the fish out of the net, dumping them into storage holds on board filled with circulating brine water.

After the net is drawn fully,

At the processing stage on shore, the oil is extracted first in some other industrial products. Europe also buys quantity of the oil and uses it in some food products.

"Oil is the major moneymaker for the menhaden industry, but the meal carries quite a large portion of the load," Lea said. "You might say the meal breaks the industry even, but the oil carries it over into the profit column.'

Once the oil is extracted, the When the fish are fish are ground up, cooked in ovens and dried. After drying, the meal is ready to be as chicken feed ingredients.

Large rail cars are filled daily with the fish meal, and to is the Sanderson Farm Feed Mill in Laurel. The feed mill uses more than 60 tons of material weekly.

Cliff Dixon, a Sanderson Feed Mill poultry nutritionist, said the feed is formulated by a computer that mixes it to certain specifications.,

"Since fish meal is a nutritious source of protein, we often allow it to take the place of soybean meal or meat and bone meal in our ration when it is economical, _______

"It is a good source of energy. It is high in phosphorous and an excellentsource of amino acids."

Like fisheries specialist Lea, Dixon also recognizes the hidden factor in the menhaden that appears to promote poultry growth.

After the meal is mixed with all other needed nutrients, it is loaded aboard trucks and distributed to many poultry farms in south Mississippi. Because of the menhaden, a renewable natural resource in the sea, a renewable resource land, chickens, has a supply of inexpensive nutritive feed. -

Governor proclaims industrial arts week recently proclaimed this week as National Industrial Arts Education Week Mississippi.

Approximately 100 school districts in the state offer industrial arts programs and 25,000 junior high and high school students are enrolled.

A State Department of Education spokesman reported, "Industrial arts education provides students an opportunity to develop knowledge, skills, creative thinking, career exploration, scientific investigation and industrial awareness. Learning experiences involve Steven Stubbs and Troy activities such as designing, constructing, evaluation, Governor William Winter experimenting, and using tools, machines, materials, and processes."

The student organization, the American Industrial Arts Student Association of Mississippi, received its charter in 1979 and there are about 30 chapters in the state. The student organization

"and the industrial arts programs are sponsored by the Vocational and Technical Division of the State Depart ment of Education.

Some 280 industrial arts teachers in the state are urging the public to visit industrial arts programs in area schools during the observance of National Industrial Arts Education Week. -

Don't forget - a new way of charging for Directory Assistance (DA) calls goes into effect with the date of your phone bill this month. With the new method, customers who use DA most will pay more for it. Here's how it works:

- You can make 10 DA calls (local - 1+411 or 411 - or in-state long distance - 1+555-1212) during a monthly billing period (for each phone line) at no extra charge. You can request 3 numbers on each call. There will be a 20¢ charge for each DA call beginning with the 11th call.

- You can make one in-state long distance DA call without charge for each in state long distance call completed from and charged to your line in a monthly billing period, or for each unused call in vour 10-call allowance

The following calls are exempt from extra charges:

Calls to DA for numbers outside Mississippi (1 + area code Calls from customers who have been exempted because they have disabilities that prevent them from using the phone directory. For information on how to apply for an exemption call the South Central Bell Residence Service Center.

• Calls from coin phones. • Calls from mobile phones.

• Calls from hospital patient rooms and hotel and motel

Remember...the best way to avoid extra DA charges is to look in the book. And when you do call DA, write the numbers downand keep them handy.

the Gulf Coast Research Laboratory offers an opportunity for coastal area residents to learn more about marine and estauine animals' and plants that inhabit the Mississippi Gulf coast and about research techniques used to study them.

"Coastal residents are constantly expressing interest in knowing more, about the marine environment of our state. We urge them to take advantage of this opportunity to find out what part the Gulf Coast Research Laboratory plays in research and teaching in the marine sciences," said Dr. Harold Howse, director of the Laboratory.

Beginning at 10 a.m. and continuing until 4 p.m., both the main campus on East Beach in Ocean Springs and the Marine Education Center south of Highway 90 at the west end of the Biloxi-Ocean Springs bridge, will be open to the public. The Hawks surprised Poplarville last Friday coming from behind in a 21-20 before a stunned Homecoming Hornet crowd.

The Pirates held tight against arch rival Long Beach, but came up on the short end of a 13-0 score.

Irvin Favre, Hawk head coach said. "You know the Pirates have shut us out the last two seasons. They always play us a very good game. The Pirates record of 3-5-1 may not played some much larger schools like Harrison Central and Long Beach."

"No one has run over the Pirate defense, as it is very are to come up with a 6-4 season." Favre added.

Favre continued, "We have given up quite a few points this season. If we are to win, our defense will have to play a good game and our offense move the ball on the Pirates, will open their 1981 girls and because their defense is

Rocks out to complicate conference lead

By RANDY PONDER The St. Stanislaus Bock-A Chaws, going for an undefeated season at home, will host the league leading Vancleave Bulldogs in the final game of the year Friday night in Bay St. Louis.

A victory by the Rock-A-Chaws would throw the Buildogs into a conference tie with the d'Iberville Warriors, necessitating a playoff game to determine a champion.

St. Stanislaus is not in the running for the conference championship, having lost to d'Iberville and being tied by Pass Christian.

Vancleave is undefeated and has already beaten d'Iberville in a triple overtime

"We feel we are as good or better than any team in the conference," stated St. Stanislaus coach Barry Jones. "We haven't lost a home game all season," Jones added.

Mark Warren is the Bulldog's main threat. Warren has scored 114 points in nine games.

That's a league leading 18 touchdowns for an average of two per game. Vancleave also valuable weapon in place kicker Rex Banks, who has booted four fieldgoals and eighteen extra point conversions.

Juan Betanzos has kicked four fieldgoals and fourteen extra points for the Rock-A-Chaws.

"In order for us to win, we must maintain ball control," Jones commented. "Vancleave has a lot riding on this ball game. If they win they're the conference champions. It's as simple as that."

The Bulldogs' defense has given up only 65 points all year while the offense has total 200. St. Stanislaus has allowed 89 points and scored 150.

Vancleave has the advantage in both departments. Last week Stone County fell to the Bulldogs, 14-13 and the Rock's buried East Central 27-

In that contest St. Stanislaus totaled 267 yards of offense, allowing the Hornets only 83. . "If we don't give them an easy score, it should be a goodclose game," Jones said of this week's matchup.

Game time is 7:30 p.m. at the Rock's stadium on Bookter Street in Bay St. Louis.

OFF TO THE RACES—Halfback Sean Logan, No. 22, trys to out run East Central Hornet defensive back Tony Taylor who has an angle on him. Logan carried the football 19 times for 127 yards and two touchdowns. He also passed to Mac Meyer for another score. Rock's quarterback Joe Gex rushed for 68 yards as St. Stanislaus crushed East Central last Friday, 27-0. This week the Rock-A-Chaws will entertain the Vancleave Bulldogs. toughest schedules ever scorer or rebounder in 16 during the 1980-81 season, but it's one that Coach Van Chancellor approaches with optimism.

"This will be one of the toughest schedules we've had in terms of playing quality teams in our state, regionally and nationally," Chancellor "The Southeastern Conference is becoming stronger and stronger in women's basketball and our state has always been recognized as one of the leaders; so the competition becomes keener every year."

National champion Old Dominion plus tough powers such as Missouri and Delta State will face the Lady Rebels in Oxford this season. while road trips include visits to Stephen F. Austin and South Carolina, two of the top teams in the country last year.

The 1980-81 edition of the Lady Rebel squad will feature five freshmen and five but newcomers aren't without ability and enthusiasm:

"We're long on hustle, but short on experience," said Chancellor, who has never had a losing season as a women's basketball coach. "We've got a lot of players who are very capable, but they haven't played, much college basketball.

The Lady Rebels signed three players from the first two All-State teams in Mississippi this year, including Sandra Helms of Enterprise, Carolyn McKay of Grenada and Sherry King of Brandon.

RARE FIND—Bay Theatre Operator Kelvin Schulz recently discovered an old sign for Uncle Charlie's Night Club in the attic while rennovating the building. The night club occupied the present theatre building in the 1930's and was owned and operated by the late Charles Breath Sr. of Bay St. Louis. Young man paid $2.50 fine to church for getting tight

We had to work a lot of land to make much of a crop back then as there was no such thing as commercial fer-

We would put out the lot fertilizer but that would not go very far. Also the weeds of all kinds would take the crop unless there was plenty of work done to keep them down.

My father hired the negroes to do most of the work as he could get all of them he wanted for about 35 cents a day and feed them.

While conditions were hard compared to these modern tinjes, liying in many ways was easy up, and down Pearl River back 70 to 80 years ago. Pearl River swamp furnished a good living for hogs as they stayed fat year round from what they got to eat from the swamp land.

Cattle also did well all year round. There was only one drawback to the stock business in Pearl River swamp - high water was liable to come at any time.

My father lost 500 head of fine cattle at one time when a big overflow came, Usually we could get the stock out of. the swamp before the water got too high but this time the water came so fast and so much of it that we did not have time to get them out. I think this must have been in 1900 when Pearl River got the highest it has ever been known

Another way in which the river was a big help was in floating logs down to the sawmills at Gainesville, Logtown and Pearlington.

Almost everybody back then cut logs and floated them down to these sawmills, in fact, this was almost the only way most people got hold of any real money. Gainesville was our trading center. Most everybody when they went anywhere at all went to Gainesville before the railroad came through. Going to market, as they called it, was an important occasion. In the late fall and winter. they would begin to prepare to go to town. When the first cold spell came, they would butcher a load of fat hogs, kill a few deer and turkeys and carry along butter and eggs. The boys would prepare for the trip by catching a load of gophers.

I remember my Uncle Bill Burks telling about going with grandmother to Gainesville. They got the wagon all loaded up when they found out that the gophers had been put next to the butter.

The gopher is a tough animal. In some way one of them pried off a board and got into the butter tub.

They did not want to lose a whole load of butter, neither did they want to lose a gopher, so they cleaned all the butter off the gopher and nailed him back up in the goplier pen more securely. Then the cleaned out all the butter that showed any against being colored. happened. She solemnly me when I was a boy. promised to keep mum about

When they arrived in Gainesville the first person to Before Uncle Bill could stop her Grandma said, "Yes we have as fine a tub of butter as Molly ever rested her heel fell in it." That stopped the game. butter sale.

While talking about gophers, Uncle Bill went on another trip but this time he went to Bay St. Louis carrying with him a load of peaches and

He would show them how to stand on a gopher's back and got some women interested in buying them for pets. He would sell a gopher, then when the lady would ask him what to feed a gopher he would answer, "Peaches, lady." bushel of peaches to feed the gopher.

He sold all his gophers and all his peaches. Uncle Bill used to boast of his salesmanship and tell about this incident.

It seems that a man named Brance Cooper from east of Picayune was in Bay St. Louis at the same time as Uncle Bill with a load of gophers and peaches but Cooper was not up to the occasion as Uncle Bill told it.

He said that a lady asked Cooper what the gophers were. Cooper answered, "They are what we call gophers." "What do you do with them?" asked the lady. "Some people eat 'em," said Cooper, "but I would not eat one for $5." And the sale was over but a darned old gopher of stock and in hunting wild least an hour.

not shaped to the body like the pants of today.

Practically all clothing was made at home back in the old days. Very few women back then could cut and fit clothes they just sewed 'em up. If you. could see those old clothes on somebody walking down the Then he would sell her a street today, you'd wonder where in the world such a getup came from.

> I remember back in 1898 when I first got married I bought some cloth to make me a shirt and pants. Mom said, "Let Alice (my wife) make them, she has to learn sometime."

Both pieces of material looked alike and were called O'hickory. What she had made when she got through looked like neither pants nor shirt, but more like Teddy Bear rompers.

I can still remember a pair of long pants my mother made for me for the big meeting. They were made of a light tan linen. I don't remember whether she pressed them or not, but I do remember that

As they went along, Uncle lost! There are many old they stood out round and bow Bill warned grandma not to stories about these trips to legged with a thousand say a word about what had market that the old people told wrinkles in them.

I got my first pair of long Many people back in the old pants when I was about 12 days placed great value on years old and I thought I was their dogs, in fact, to hear some ladies man. All the them talk you'd think they younger boys wore knee come along wanted to know if thought more of their dogs pants. I can well remember they had any butter for sale. than they did of their children. wearing these new pants to They would spend hours church and kneeling down on telling friends of the merits of bare knees on the rough pine their dogs. A good dog was lumber floor for prayers that most valuable in taking care seemed to me to last for at

All the boys back then wore community who had the galluses, as we called them, reputation of being bad - that made of the same material as is devilish. One day when the their parts. Almost no one mayer started he rected off wore belts such as people his coat, folded it up and put it wear today - they were afraid under his bare knees, looked gophers. The market for both to wear belts with their homewas dull. He decided that he made pants for fear the pants in a whisper, "Go ahead, old would try to sell the gophers would fall down as they were horse, I'm with you today." really strict. You could not dance, curse, get tight or run a horse race for someone would report you to the church. One time when I got a little too much, the pastor came to see me and said if I would give him $2.50 my case would not come up in the church. I paid him the $2.50. The case never did come up.

Later, someone told me that I never had a case, that I was not reported but just guilty in my own mind. Anyway the preacher got my $2.50 which he must have needed pretty

RESEEDING CLOVER

MANAGEMENT The increasing cost of nitrogen fertilizer, the need for improved forage quality and a general shortage of stored winter feed strengthens the need to secure good stands from reseeding (volunteer) clovers in permanent pastures says John W. Smith, county agent.

"On bahiagrass and bermudagrass pastures the single most important practice to help assure a stand from reseeding clover is the removal of all grass residue immediately by heavily grazing and clipping or by harvesting for hay. Where grass is in clumps and not too heavy, clipping closely is ususally satisfactory. After germination young clover plants must have light and growing room to survive. Where several inches of dense grass is left standing, many seedling plants will be shaded out. Also, it is advisable to protect young clover plants from grazing until the stand is well established," Smith explains.

Smith recommends where clover has not started to germinate, a shallow renovation with a harrow or field cultivator with springtine type shanks and pasture plow points triple K type will do a good job of preparing a shallow seed-bed and spreading manure plus helping reduce competition from the permanent sod. A pulverizing disk with the set almost straight works satisfactorily, if followed by a chainlink type harrow to level the field and spread manure.

"Overseeding 20 pounds of ryegrass will increase the volume of forage produced and aid in reducing bloat. Where phosphate and potash are being applied, the ryegrass can be added to the fertilizer. No nitrogen should be applied at this time. After ryegrass and clover are up to a stand some nitrogen can be applied as a topdressing if crops are growing slowly andor grazing is needed," Smith

Where clover has started and there an pears to be an acceptable stand, it should not be disturbed. These early germinating fields will often give some grazing by late fall or ealy winter. However, if ryegrass is wanted a grain drill equipped with heavy duty double-disk opener feet or with special pasture attachments can often be used to plant ryegrass with a minimum of damage to the clover seedlings. The simplest way to add ryegrass in this situation is to broadcast on the soil surface with no soil. disturbance, but ryegrass establishment will be slower," Smith says.

"To maintain clover stands the soil pH must be kept at 6.0 or above with the phosphate and potash at medium or above levels according to soil test. With the increasing cost of lime, phosphate and potash, fertilizing by soil test recommendations is the only way to assure the fertilizer dollar is being spent wisely. In absence of a soil test, a
